PROJECT PLACE'S NEW RIDE

Project Place, a Boston organization that provides programming for people dealing with addiction, mental illness, domestic violence and poverty, purchased a van recently with funds provided through Mercantile Bank's Social Responsibility Committee. From left, Randal Rucker, chairman of Mercantile Bank's Social Responsibility Committee and CFO of Family Services of Greater Boston; Suzanne Kenney, executive director of Project Place; and Stephen Lucitt, vice president of Mercantile Bank. Project Place will use the van to transport clients to job sites.
